of pumice was found on the shores of Hrujard, 180 miles west, and in Kyjafjord—miles north, which have floated in from northern sea. Our steamer went through the floating patches of ice coming north, and crossed a patch of it going south when it reached east of Kap Langeranes. This light material may be tossed about far and wide by wind and currents for a long time. The fires at Miyata and Dyngjufell seem to have been in a measure simultaneous, although many miles distant from each other in a straight line, and further eruptions are not impossible. At 1 p.m. on the day of our journey out to the latter place, when at a sufficient elevation, we saw a great column of smoke from Miyata and a red reflection in the clouds.

which could not be accounted for by the at that hour. The guides were satisfied it was a new fire. The Professor of Lundberg saw it also at a greater distance, but was not so certain. A large fire of Aureary, no confirmation had been received from anyone who had been there. The plum explorers, however, may be able to on their return, when was the fact.

I would not presume to advance any of my own, or conjecture as to the origin of the lava. It is a fact, however, that the west, and north of Iceland, the appearance presented to my eyes is not that of streams lava that have run down from the craters a mountain as described of European other volcanoes, although it is on record such is the case. It appears to be all heaved to different heights, and either solid as plains, hills, and mountains, or up in broken masses by subsequent eruptions, by water or earthquake. — *Gleanings

MAKE A BEGINNING.

How many a poor, idle, pestiferous, entangled in now creeping, crawling life, through the row, who might have held his head and prospered; if, instead of puttoff his resolutions of amendment and such is the career. It appears to be all
Herald.*

The valley in which we were was continu

THE MACE.

Connected with our legislative assembly there are certain odd forms of proceeding which it may be presumed that very few

I determined to attempt the ascent of mountain and ascertain, if possible, the nat standing in the lobby of the House of Commons, the Speaker in his robes entered, preceded by a gentleman with a bag-wig, a sword by his side, carrying on his shoulder a large gold mace, which he placed on a table in the center of the room. It is a well-known fact, however, that few people have ever seen a mace, this toy is to the legislator what the scepter is to the monarch, the duties of their representatives. Be it known, then, that without it the House of Commons does not exist; and that it is as sacred to them as the mace itself be present at all deliberations of our senate, and that the Speaker of the House is the only member who holds the House, never proceeds to business, and without his mace the Speaker cannot take the chair. At the commencement of new Parliament, and before election of the Speaker, this valuable emblem of his dignity is hidden under the table of the House, and the clerk of the table presides. When the Speaker is elected, the Speaker is elected, then it is drawn from hiding-place, and deposited on the table, where it ever after remains during the sitting of the House; at its rising Mr. Speaker carries it away with him; and never returns out of his keeping. This important duty of the Speaker's due, in a long and important period of his life, may have been called the walking-stick, was most gravely done in the year 1783, as appears by the "Journal of the House of Commons." On that occasion, Sir John Cust, the Speaker, was taken ill, sent to leave the House by the clerk at a table, that he could not take the chair. It appears that the mace was brought in, and that the mace might have been in the House when this important communication was made. No one, however, presumed to say that it ought to have been on the table; but many maintained that it ought, for the dignity of the House to have been undermost at it. It was generally thought, that Mr. Speaker's behavior was not very judicious, and that he was not so well as the "Journals" in three large columns of smoke ascended and a vast number of smaller ones. The whole appeared from where we stood not

THE HUMBLE WORMSPINNER.

We have but to turn ourselves into heart of the true wormspinner, and daily find of brick and mortar that clared on us from the dusty street of vincial town will become invested with poetry of the highest order. So the regulated methodical tradesman enters his building, leaving the cures and gains of the world behind him; he has no family up the narrow passage, which we not call this aisle; he needs no verge usher him into his seat; his hand recover to the familiar button that fastens door of his pew : he opens the door, let wife and children, the mother, the father, the young man, the young woman, the some secret disorder—perhaps from drawer under the seat—the Bible and Hymn-books, calf-bound, and the older them not a little soiled and dog-eared.— he distributes, and then prepares for morning devotion. One gazing fellow more or less distinctly recognises sentimental whiff, differently modified, attitudes the essence of religion in all clays and in all hearts, that he and his fam-the mountain, but believe my guide's report can be relied on, for although my Icelandic

His ways are perfect, and He requires His mystical creatures, what poor attempts perfection we can make. After some list of silence, a man, in spotless black coat white neckcloth, rises from the deal plinth opposite, a square deal box, with a real desk to it, which desk has no other ornament or furniture than the one heavy book of devotion which he is to read. He takes that one book, sacrifices the whole Take that away, and all is dirt and admire. But our man in the corner, or pew could tell you that from that ce-spot has emanated, he knows not how subtle influence that has pervaded the building, so that its very plastered walls sacred to him—his very feet, his hands, pained, and his, his, his, on which has often rested as he followed the preacher. Were our man to travel, and be absent in foreign kingdoms, that in a piece of soiled deal would rise in his imagination, and suggest his mem-to him: His hand would be again or triumph of that power, and he would himself for pious, and he would be the minister, come from within. A kissed upon her priest-like before covered with glittering candlesticks flowers and lights and tapestry—there under the carved roof, which with marvellous music, as he left her heart worships better, in that room all the array of nothing symbolical be a man, to come, as the upholder of her own drawing room, unless bring to it that very poetry which our trade-man has contrived to throw of wooden pew, polished only by his elbow. *Quotation in Memoir of W.
Smith, in "Graysmith."*

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1) as  $t \rightarrow \infty$ . It is shown that the solutions of the system (1) tend to zero as  $t \rightarrow \infty$  if and only if the matrix  $A$  is Hurwitz. The second part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1) as  $t \rightarrow 0$ . It is shown that the solutions of the system (1) tend to zero as  $t \rightarrow 0$  if and only if the matrix  $A$  is Hurwitz. The third part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1) as  $t \rightarrow \infty$  for the case of a nonautonomous system. It is shown that the solutions of the system (1) tend to zero as  $t \rightarrow \infty$  if and only if the matrix  $A$  is Hurwitz. The fourth part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1) as  $t \rightarrow 0$  for the case of a nonautonomous system. It is shown that the solutions of the system (1) tend to zero as  $t \rightarrow 0$  if and only if the matrix  $A$  is Hurwitz. The fifth part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1) as  $t \rightarrow \infty$  for the case of a nonautonomous system. It is shown that the solutions of the system (1) tend to zero as  $t \rightarrow \infty$  if and only if the matrix  $A$  is Hurwitz. The sixth part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1) as  $t \rightarrow 0$  for the case of a nonautonomous system. It is shown that the solutions of the system (1) tend to zero as  $t \rightarrow 0$  if and only if the matrix  $A$  is Hurwitz. The seventh part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1) as  $t \rightarrow \infty$  for the case of a nonautonomous system. It is shown that the solutions of the system (1) tend to zero as  $t \rightarrow \infty$  if and only if the matrix  $A$  is Hurwitz. The eighth part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1) as  $t \rightarrow 0$  for the case of a nonautonomous system. It is shown that the solutions of the system (1) tend to zero as  $t \rightarrow 0$  if and only if the matrix  $A$  is Hurwitz. The ninth part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1) as  $t \rightarrow \infty$  for the case of a nonautonomous system. It is shown that the solutions of the system (1) tend to zero as  $t \rightarrow \infty$  if and only if the matrix  $A$  is Hurwitz. The tenth part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1) as  $t \rightarrow 0$  for the case of a nonautonomous system. It is shown that the solutions of the system (1) tend to zero as  $t \rightarrow 0$  if and only if the matrix  $A$  is Hurwitz.
